

Leading Without Authority

Roleplay 1 – Peer Conversation

Person B – Feedback receiver

You are a successful Associate with a good track record. You are good at what you do and get results.

Outside of what you consider to be your role, you have very little time and patience at meetings. You feel that sometimes these meetings are a distraction and hold you back from actually getting things done. You see little point in getting involved in these meetings when other people always seem to be saying what you would be saying anyway and you feel that the meetings are irrelevant.

Your behavioural preference is about getting things done and achieving goals and you should behave in a way during this roleplay that demonstrates this.
